

Judgement is sometimes thought of weighing things up carefully and fairly. Is this your understanding of judgement?

Who do you think should offer judgement? Would you be comfortable offering judgement, whether it be of a small or large matter?

Blake (l) and Rubens
(r)

Artists and wordsmiths have tried with varying degrees of success to capture the so-called Final Judgement. William Blake and Peter Paul Rubens have given us the offerings opposite. What do you make of them?

The French thinker, Albert Camus said this: Do not wait for the last judgment. It takes place every day. What do you think he meant?

Wassily Kandinsky (above) and Miao
Xioachun (below)

Christians often see the Cross as a sign of God's love, judgement and mercy.

This popular theology is not often reflected in art. Why do you think that is?

Advent 2011

Judgement

Images of Judgement